

NDAY FOOTBALL FOR SCHOOLBOYS BRINGS PROTEST

uer Silent on Action of New Orleans Ministerial Union

igorous protest against participation by public school youths in Sunday football games is voiced in resolutions sent Wednesday by the New Orleans Ministerial Union to the officers of the Orleans parish school board.

The union in the resolutions, adopted at a recent meeting of the group, requests that public school teams play football games through the end of the season be cancelled at once.

Superintendent of Schools Nicholas Bauer has no comment to make regarding the resolutions adopted Wednesday afternoon. "I will turn the resolutions over to the school board at the meeting November 13," he said.

The resolutions, asserting that Sunday football "smacks of professionalism," urge school authorities to end their assistance to remedy this condition at once.

Resolutions Adopted The resolutions follow: "Whereas, it has come to our attention, through the public press and information of our children, that public high schools have conducted football games to be played on Sunday, and

"Whereas, this practice not only harms the present season, but several seasons prior to this, and

"Whereas, it is held on good authority that the board of education supporting the playing of Sunday football games by our local high schools, therefore,

"Be it resolved that we, the New Orleans Ministerial Union, a body of obedient ministers of this city, representing 40 per cent of the population of the city, and an even larger percentage of the high school enrollment of this city, do hereby

"Be it further resolved that we and this practice as thoroughly un-American, and out of step with the native thinking and development of American youth, and out of harmony with the recreational program of other American cities and high schools, smacking of a professionalism that we deeply deplore, and

"Be it further resolved that we demand the cancellation of such games to be played on Sunday, and at assurance be given by our board of education no further games contracted for Sunday playing, and that local high school authorities end their assistance to remedy this condition at once."

"Nothing Wrong in Playing" The resolutions are said to have been adopted by the union on motion of the Rev. William H. Wallace, Jr., pastor of the First Methodist church, in opposition which included the Rev. William N. Weaver, pastor of a 'Carrollton Avenue Christian church, president of the union; the Rev. John S. Land, pastor of the St. Charles Avenue Presbyterian church, and the Rev. Norman Maunz, pas-

THREE MINERS DIE IN 200-FOOT FALL

(By International News Service) Kirkland Lake, Ont., Nov. 4.—Three miners were killed here today in a 200-foot fall from a staging in a shaft at the Lakeshore mine.

The men were George Cadman, Bert Peterson and Charles Dooda, son of the First Evangelical church and a past president of the union.

In making the resolutions public Wednesday, the Rev. Mr. Weaver said they did not necessarily express his personal view of the subject discussed therein.

"I see nothing wrong with playing football on Sunday," said he, "as long as it does not interfere with attendance at church services."

GENTILLY SCHOOL CHILDREN MARCH OUT DURING FIRE

Principal Gives Alarm; All Pupils Leave Building Safely

Fire originating near the chimney of the heating plant Wednesday morning destroyed the roofs of the east wing and central portion of the Gentilly Terrace school, 4730 Painters street, after more than 600 children had marched to safety in what they thought was an ordinary fire drill.

A conference will be held today at 9:30 a. m. on the school grounds between adjusters of the New Orleans Insurance Exchange, representing insurance companies which jointly cover all school board property, and officials of the school board to determine the extent of the damage. The school board's representatives will include Jacob Schlosser, maintenance superintendent, and E. A. Christy, architect for the board.

No Classes Today No classes will be held today, it was announced by Nicholas Bauer, superintendent of schools. Beginning Friday, however, the pupils will be accommodated temporarily in the undamaged wings of the quadrangular structure, while auxiliary classrooms may be set up in church and other quarters in the neighborhood which have been offered for that purpose.

Coolness of the principal, Miss Henrietta C. Keitz, 2719 North Rampart street, who has had charge of the school since the first unit, containing eight rooms, was constructed 22 years ago, was credited with having averted a panic among the children.

Miss Keitz discovered the fire at 9:20 a. m. as she was making her usual round of the corridors following the morning assemblies. A thick haze of smoke in the front stairway shaft attracted her attention, and the odor seemed to be that of wood rather than coal, she said.

She knew the furnace fires of the hot water heating system in the rear of the central unit of the school had been stoked against Wednesday's chill, but, as is her custom when smoke pours thickly from the chimney, she moved to a side window overlooking the patio in order to satisfy herself that all was well.

See Flames She found instead that flames were flicking from beneath the tiles of the sloping roof against which the chimney is set.

Miss Keitz ran to her office, grabbed the hand bell used for fire alarm drill signals, instructed an assistant to call the fire department, and sounded the drill alarm. The pupils, filling out without books or cloaks, all were outside within 60 seconds, she estimated.

For five minutes the children and teachers remained on the edge of the school grounds, unaware that the building was on fire. Protracted absence of Miss Keitz first gave them the clue. Then the smoke, which had been hidden by the front part of the school, mushroomed upward, and excitement spread.

Miss Keitz was using the five minutes to good advantage. She rescued from her book locker a sum representing Community Chest contributions from teachers and pupils,

VIRGINIAN FOUND BOUND, SLAIN IN NEW YORK HOTEL

Wire, Necktie, Belt Used to Bind Victim; Room Is Shambles

Continued from Page One or, they started for the street entrance but Arthur Boggini, night clerk, halted them. One identified himself as Ford and the clerk informed him he would have to settle his bill of $11, or else leave his luggage. Both men dropped their grips, the one calling himself Ford saying that he would return for them two days later, and the pair disappeared into the street.

Mother on Way Examination of the body showed that Ford had been murdered at about the time the strangers were visiting him. He had been struck on the head and knocked unconscious with a small radio in his room. The radio, with one corner broken off, was found in one of the grips. Also in the grips was a woman's fur neckpiece.

Fingerprints found on the bottle and glasses were sent to police headquarters for examination, but no other possible clues to the slayers were found.

A dispatch from Roanoke announced that the victim's mother, Mrs. R. McLannan Ford, employed as a secretary by the Norfolk and Western railroad, is hurrying to New York to aid in the investigation of her son's death.
